

Research Support Initiatives

The University Libraries offer many research support initiatives and services for faculty, including those listed below and online. http://library.uncg.edu/research/faculty\_support.aspx

Library Liaisons

Assigned to each academic department, learning community, institute, and program to work with faculty to ensure that the Libraries' collections support their research and to assist faculty and students with specific research needs. Liaisons also work with faculty to design assignments and deliver instruction to help students learn important information literacy skills.

Data Services and Data Management

Assistance and consultation with statistics and numeric data discovery, the Inter-university Consortium for Political and Social Research (ICPSR), and statistical software packages (primarily SPSS and SAS). We also offer assistance creating effective data management plans for grant applications, as well as support for archiving and sharing of research data sets.

Large Scale Digitization Projects

We consult on digitization standards and techniques. In some cases, we may be able to work directly with faculty on their large scanning projects. <http://library.uncg.edu/dp/>

NC DOCKS

UNCG's institutional repository houses faculty publications and research and makes that content available for broad access worldwide. <http://libres.uncg.edu/ir/uncg/>

Research Support Services

The University Libraries can provide a variety of IT-related support, including long-term web hosting, web design, user interface development, programming, database design, data management, and long-term archiving of research data. Faculty interested in significant Library IT support for a project should apply for a Digital Partners grant: http://library.uncg.edu/research/support/digital\_partners.aspx

Research Databases, eJournals and eBooks

UNCG has more than 450 research databases, 110,000 eJournals, and 1.2 million eBooks. Faculty in need of additional content to support research should contact Christine Fischer at cmfische@uncg.edu

Scholarly Communication

The University Libraries offer support for scholarly publishing and sharing needs and initiatives, including open access, copyright, and author rights. <https://uncg.libguides.com/scholarlycomm>

Open Access Publishing Support Fund

Faculty, EPA employees, and graduate students may apply for an award of up to $1,500 to pay for article processing fees associated with publishing in open access journals. <https://go.uncg.edu/oa-pub>

Martha Blakney Hodges Special Collections and University Archives

The Martha Blakney Hodges Special Collections and University Archives (SCUA) at UNC Greensboro collects, preserves, and makes accessible unique and historical materials for learning and research. The department promotes the use of these materials by the University's academic community, scholars, and the public. Its goal is to advance scholarship and to further the educational and service missions of the University. SCUA@UNCG.edu (See SCUA's Website)

Open Educational Resources

Open Educational Resources (OER) are high-quality, freely available materials for use in your classroom. The Libraries can help you identify (or even create) these resources, which can replace traditional textbooks, helping your students save money. <https://uncg.libguides.com/OER>

Zotero and Other Citation Management Tools

These applications for storing citations and generating in-text references and bibliographies are freely available to all or are provided for free to current UNCG faculty. Contact your library liaison for basic support and training. <https://uncg.libguides.com/zotero>

Reservable Spaces

Faculty can reserve group and individual spaces of varying sizes, configurations and technologies throughout the library; availability of reservable space may be impacted by public health and safety precautions. <http://library.uncg.edu/spaces/reserve.aspx>

Grants Resource Guide

The University Libraries offer grant support, including information about grants for special groups, grant writing, and grant examples. <https://uncg.libguides.com/grants>
