SPEAKER SERIES

Celebrating Exemplars: Stories from the Field

A virtual event series from Campus Compact & the International Association for Research on Service-
Learning and Community Engagement (IARSLCE)
June 2023

Community-Engaged Scholars Share Their Work Addressing Systemic Inequities in Communities and Institutions

In this virtual event series, hear from outstanding scholars, leaders, and practitioners about their work and the journeys that brought them to where they are today.

Join Campus Compact Impact Award and 2022 IARSLCE Award winners, Jennifer Carrera, Tabbye Chavous, and Samantha Francois, as they share their work on addressing systemic inequities in communities and institutions. This is the second installment of a four-part virtual series, where community-engaged scholars have the opportunity to discuss their contributions to higher education and civic and community engagement through research and practice. Join us in celebrating their accomplishments and exploring new and innovative approaches to our shared work.

Thursday, June 15th from 3:00 - 4:00 PM

The International Journal of Research on Service Learning and Community-Engagement

The International Journal of Research on Service-Learning and Community Engagement (IJRSLCE) has an open call for peer reviewers.

Peer reviewers play an essential role in ensuring that the articles published in the journal reflect high-quality research. IJRSLCE follows a double-blind review process: the manuscript author and reviewer remain anonymous to each other throughout the review process. Reviewers are asked to evaluate the manuscript based on set criteria and to make publishing recommendations, which go to the Editors for the final decision.

PODCAST

Humanities for Good

Humanities for Good is a three-episode podcast series about public humanities work at UNC Greensboro, a hub for community-engaged scholarship. In these episodes, public historian and exhibit curator, Dr. Anne Parsons, discusses why public humanities matter, why UNCG is a great place for this work, and how we can do it better. This podcast was sponsored by the Humanities Network and Consortium at UNCG and a SSRC/NEH SHIP Grant.
